

David grew up in Canada and started work as a copywriter at TBWA/Toronto. He moved to Mother London in 2003 and won countless awards for his 'Gold Spot' and 'Dance' ads for Orange. He relocated to the US with Goodby, Silverstein & Partners in 2007 but returned to the UK in 2010 to join Bartle Bogle Hegarty, where he helped create the internationally famous 'Three Little Pigs' ad for The Guardian. In 2015 David took over as the creative head of Droga 5 London.
